Introduction

The Art of War Tarot is a modern oracle that combines the art of strategy with the art of insight. It is based on two most-practiced divination systems today: the Art of War (Qi Men Dun Jia, or QMDJ for short) and the Tarot—both of which have stood the test of time for delivering guidance. For the first time ever, with the Art of War Tarot, readers have an opportunity to use an oracle deck that organically integrates the magick of the East and the West.

Just imagine the power of this mix! The Tarot archetypes, so human in their longing for love and fear of death, merge with Qi Men Dun Jia's mystical universe of demons, shining stars, spirits, and deities. Concealed behind mysterious doors, they interact, clash, support, or deplete one another—mirroring human actions, albeit in another realm.

The Tarot relates closely to Western magick tradition, while the Art of War originates from the Chinese Book of Military Magick. QMDJ is about avoiding confrontation by creating a winning strategy aimed at preventing losses on the battlefield. For the contemporary reader, this approach unveils multidimensional possibilities for self-transformation, problem-solving, and spiritual guidance.

The Art of War Tarot communicates with clarity and precision. As an oracle system rooted in the oldest esoteric traditions, it describes reality in a novel, more direct way than either of these oracles in their original form.

The deck consists of sixty-one cards. While following the Tarot structure in its division of the major and minor arcana, this oracle deck incorporates the deities and stars belonging to the Art of War. It also includes three Magic Keys—a new oracle element unique to this deck.

The minor arcana follows the Chinese Five Elements Theory. There are five suits representing the elements of Fire, Earth, Metal, Water, and Wood, with cards numbered from one to five.

The deck has no court arcana, meaning there is no explicit reference to gender, age, or social status. Readers can still access this information by analyzing the symbols, but this approach allows for greater inclusivity.

Although the deck is quite unique in its concept, readers can use it like a traditional Tarot to answer questions about love, wealth, fame, or any other aspect of life. Unlike most decks, it is designed to equip diviners with practical solutions that can be applied in real-world situations.

While the market is saturated with beautiful and inspiring decks, few can be used for professional forecasting and situational analysis.

Designed by a divination master who understands the complex forces at play in any given situation, the Art of War Tarot is a reliable divination tool for a contemporary professional fortune-teller. It delivers subtle psychological insights, offering both practical guidance and inspiration for action.

Meeting Your Inner Warrior

Ask yourself: What would you change in your life if you could? Your job, your relationship, your career? Would you change your life direction—or start all over again from scratch?

Whatever you would change, you're not alone in trying to find your path in these turbulent times. Wherever you are in your journey, pause for a moment and breathe out. You're about to find the answers you seek.

Many years ago, I was lost, unsure of where I was going. I worked harder and harder, learning as much as I could, yet nothing made me happy or fulfilled. I felt unsettled. Eventually, I began to fall apart—exhausted mentally, emotionally, and physically.

But after hitting bottom, I discovered that answers do not come unless we ask the right. The right questions pierce through the veil of the unknown. This is how I began discovering my Inner Warrior.

Questioning always means challenging something that makes us unhappy. When we question, we refuse to accept what hurts or weakens us - freeing the fractures within so we can harness our strength.

But how do we find the right questions if we are in the habit of dismissing what we feel, what we think, and what we truly desire?

Why do we ignore our Inner Warrior—the part of us with the courage to face challenges and reveal who we truly are? Why do we resist the very force meant to protect us from self-sabotage?

Take a deep breath. Exhale, and honor the Force within you. Let it guide you through the Art of War Tarot, an oracle fusion designed to protect and empower you. It cuts through illusion, giving you the clarity and resolve of the ancient mages.

Anatomy of the Deck

The Art of War Tarot is a hybrid oracle that merges the strategic wisdom of Sun Tzu with the symbolic depth of the Tarot.

Tarot is a centuries-old system of divination used to gain insight into the past, present, and future. In a Tarot reading, a seeker draws and interprets cards in response to personal questions or concerns.

The Art of War (also known as Qi Men Dun Jia, QMDJ, or 奇门遁甲) is an ancient Chinese forecasting and magick method derived from the Book of Military Magick. It focuses on choosing the best time, direction, and strategy to create the most auspicious outcome. A seeker analyzes the cosmic board to answer questions about travel, health, relationships, and more.

Qi Men Dun Jia translates to “Mysterious Door Hiding Jia.” According to legend, Jia 甲 is the chief commander of an army under threat, and he must be protected at all costs. His guardians’ task is to avoid direct combat through clever strategy.

In divination, the chief commander Jia 甲 symbolizes vitality. At its core, QMDJ is about protecting what is most valuable: human life. It teaches how to achieve victory without putting yourself or your resources in harm's way.

QMDJ draws upon Chinese metaphysical theory, including the concepts of Yin and Yang, the Five Elements, eight trigrams, heavenly stems, earthly branches, and the twenty-four solar terms.

The Art of War Tarot unites the essence of both systems. The deck is divided into major and minor arcana. While fully incorporating the traditional twenty-two major arcana cards, the minor arcana arrangement is based on the Five Elements Theory.

The Five Elements model of the universe, also known as Wu Xing, is a fundamental concept in Chinese cosmology. It describes the universe through the interaction of five elements: Wood, Fire, Earth, Metal, and Water.

All processes in the universe are governed by three types of interaction between the elements: control, production, and depletion. Symbolically, the Chinese Five Elements model represents the cycle of life through these interactions—reflected also in the human realm, with its inherent drama and struggle for survival.

In this sixty-one-card deck, the major and minor arcana are supplemented by the Art of War magick stars, deities, and three magic keys.

Twenty-two of these cards—the trump cards—form the major arcana, arranged in the traditional Rider–Waite–Smith sequence. These cards represent universal archetypes.

Twenty-five cards, numbered from one to five and divided into five suits, make up the minor arcana. Each suit is associated with one of the five elements in Wu Xing. The minor arcana cards explore the human dimension, in which time is an essential factor. They represent progression through the seasons of life—from spring, corresponding to youth (Wood), to autumn, representing maturity (Metal).

Eight deities, visitors from the heavens, are each represented by their own card. They embody higher forces that govern human affairs and natural phenomena. In divination, these eight deities are linked to important events.

The three magic stars symbolize natural talents, abilities, and attitudes toward life. They represent three mindsets that transcend egoistic motives: selflessness, charity, and determination to excel and transform. While the stars possess numerous attributes, they consistently act as symbols of guidance, advising us to transcend the ordinary and realize our highest potential.

The three magic keys represent one's ability to access what is hidden. They can unlock the mysteries of the past and open doors to the future. When we can trace a persistent problem to its source, we can discover the best way to resolve it.

The Art of War is about strategic thinking. It is about preventing losses and navigating life without confrontation, for whenever we fight, we inevitably lose something. Combined with Tarot, it has the power to remove obstacles and reveal the best path forward.

Let your Inner Warrior take your hand and lead you through the gate into the enchanted realm of this unique oracle.

How to Use

The structure of the Art of War Tarot is intentionally designed for clarity and ease of use. Begin by treating it as you would any Tarot or oracle deck: hold the cards, center yourself, and focus on your question. Shuffle slowly, allowing your thoughts and emotions to settle into the deck. When you feel ready, draw a card or spread.

For a single card reading, the Art of War Tarot works beautifully as a daily guide. Draw one card in the morning to attune yourself to the energies of the day. Its layered symbols, whether an element, deity, star, or archetype, will reveal how best to move through your circumstances. A single card may show where to direct your energy, what to avoid, or how to harness an unseen opportunity.

For deeper insights, you may work with any of your favorite spreads or explore one of Master Anna's signature layouts outlined in the next chapter. Whatever spread you use, it will reflect the field of forces shaping your situation. The interaction between the cards mirrors the dynamic reality in which you find yourself at this moment.

Above all, use this deck as both oracle and teacher. Each reading is not only an answer but also a lesson in strategy and transformation. The more you work with the cards, the more fluently you will learn their language, a language that weaves human longing with cosmic design, guiding you to see the battlefield of life not as a place of fear, but of possibility.

Situational Spreads

When life places us in moments of uncertainty, we often need more than a single answer, we need a map. Situational spreads are designed to provide a panoramic view of your circumstances, showing not only what is happening now but also the hidden influences, lessons, and possibilities surrounding you. The following three spreads — Master Anna Spread, Gypsie Spread, and Nine Heavens Spread — each offer a unique lens through which to understand your path and guide your decisions.

The Master Anna Spread

To know the truth of a situation, you must first know yourself.

The Master Anna Spread is designed to uncover your role in a situation from multiple dimensions: personal perception, social reflection, and the deeper weave of destiny. This spread is particularly powerful when you find yourself at a crossroads, questioning not only what to do but who you are within the unfolding circumstances. It blends strategy with self-knowledge, allowing you to see both your limitations and hidden strengths.

To begin, shuffle the deck with your situation in mind. When ready, draw seven cards and lay them in sequence. Each card reveals a distinct aspect of the question:

1. My role in the situation, the way I see it.
2. My role in the situation, the way others see it.
3. How this situation aligns with my life purpose.
4. The best course of action under the circumstances.

5. Possible losses.
6. Possible gains.
7. What holds real value - important lesson - something that becomes part of who I am as I move ahead.

Row 1: Three mirrors (Self-view, Others' view, Destiny).

Row 2: Best course of action.

Row 3: Losses and Gains (side by side).

Row 4: Real Value (anchor card at the bottom).

What makes this spread unique is its multidimensional perspective. The first three positions act as mirrors of your role: how you perceive yourself, how others see you, and how the greater design perceives you. These layers often reveal where inner misalignments or misunderstandings may be distorting the way forward.

The next four positions move from strategy to consequence. They reveal the most effective path of action, the risks you must acknowledge, the opportunities available, and finally, the treasure of self-knowledge you will carry beyond the situation. In this way, the Master Anna Spread is not only a divinatory tool but also a practice of personal integration, teaching you to align self-perception with destiny's plan.

The Gypsie Spread

The wandering path reveals the hidden currents of fate.

The Gypsie Spread is one of the oldest and most versatile layouts, known for its ability to illuminate both immediate circumstances and hidden undercurrents. It is simple to use yet profound in depth, making it suitable for both beginners and advanced readers. This spread helps you uncover not only what is happening on the surface but also the unseen forces shaping events around you.

To begin, shuffle the deck while focusing on your question. When ready, draw seven cards and lay them in a straight line from left to right. Each position in the spread reveals a distinct layer of the story:

1. The Present – the situation as it stands now.
2. The Challenge – the obstacle or conflict at play.
3. The Past – the forces or decisions that brought you here.
4. The Hidden – unseen influences or secrets not yet revealed.
5. The Advice – the strategy or action that will serve you best.
6. The Nearest Future – what is likely to unfold next.
7. The Outcome – the resolution or larger direction indicated.

Gypsie Spread Diagram (7 cards)

1 - 2 - 3 - 4 - 5 - 6 - 7

A straight horizontal line emphasizing progression.

Reads like a timeline: Present → Challenge → Past → Hidden → Advice → Near Future → Outcome.

The Gypsy Spread works especially well for questions involving relationships, financial choices, or personal dilemmas, as it highlights the interplay between inner motives and external conditions. Each card's message adds a thread to the larger narrative, showing not just what is but also how to navigate it.

The Nine Heavens Spread

“To understand destiny, one must follow the thread of time.”

The Nine Heavens Spread is designed to reveal the flow of time — how past actions shape the present, and how the present projects into the future. It is especially powerful when you need clarity about cause and effect — not just what is happening, but why, and what will unfold if no conscious change is made. This spread highlights both opportunities and risks, allowing you to act with foresight instead of being swept along by circumstance.

To work with this spread, shuffle the deck while holding your situation in mind. When ready, draw nine cards and lay them out in sequence. Each position offers a unique perspective:

1. Current situation – where things stand now.
2. The root cause – what underlies this situation.
3. Future development – how the past is likely to manifest if nothing changes.
4. Past actions leading to challenges in the current situation.
5. Past actions making the current situation easier to handle.
6. The main lesson to learn in this situation.

7. The worst-case scenario - what you stand to lose.
8. An opportunity or risk to take for a better outcome.
9. The best-case scenario - the highest potential outcome.

Nine Heavens Spread Diagram (9 cards)

A structured grid showing the past feeding into the present and the present projecting into the future.

1	2	3
4	5	6
7	8	9

Row 1: Current, Root Cause, Future (direct flow).

Row 2: Past actions that hinder/help + Lesson.

Row 3: Worst Case, Opportunity, Best Case (the outcome polarity).

The Nine Heavens Spread helps you recognize the threads of fate without being bound by them. The third position, in particular, acts as a warning — it shows the trajectory of the current path if nothing changes. Yet the spread also opens doors by revealing where opportunities exist and what lessons must be learned to unlock a better outcome.

When reading, pay attention to the contrast between positions 4 and 5 (past actions leading to challenges vs. those offering support) and positions 7 through 9 (worst-case, opportunity, best-case). These polarities often mark the precise crossroads where your choice will tip the scale. In this way, the Nine Heavens Spread functions as both prophecy and strategy, illuminating how to move wisely through your present circumstances toward a more favorable destiny.

Together, these three spreads provide a complete toolkit for situational insight. The Master Anna Spread reveals your multidimensional role in destiny, the Gypsy Spread uncovers the story and hidden currents, and the Nine Heavens Spread traces cause and effect across time. Use them individually or in sequence, and you will find yourself equipped with not just answers, but strategies for clarity and transformation.

The Major Arcana

1. The Fool

Upright – A leap into the unknown, the spark of an idea, the innocence of a child stepping into a new world. A symbol of beginnings, spontaneity, and the courage to embrace risk. A call to move forward without fear, guided by trust in possibility.

Reversed – Stagnation, lack of opportunity, or the closing of doors. The impulse to grow is blocked, and obstacles prevent new beginnings. A warning against reckless choices or waiting too long before taking action.

2. The Magician

Upright – The first act of mastery: turning vision into form. A strategist who transforms thought into action, aligning elements with precision. The beginning of the campaign, where practical steps reshape reality. Creation, command, and the art of experimentation lead to victory.

Reversed – Deception, wasted potential, or misdirected effort. A trickster, thief, or agitator — one who complicates without creating. Energy scatters, opportunities slip away, and alliances yield no gain. In health matters, it signals stagnation and lack of results. Beware of hollow gestures and interactions that drain without reward.

3. The High Priestess

Upright – Keeper of secrets, guardian of balance, silent strategist. She represents hidden knowledge, prophetic dreams, and intelligence gathered in shadows. Events unfold with mystery; information may be concealed yet vital. She signals dedication, insight, and the subtle arts of observation and analysis — the power of knowing without revealing.

Reversed – Secrets weaponized, intelligence turned against its source. A manipulative figure ruled by fear or distortion. Represents loss, misdirection, or the disappearance of something valuable. Hidden forces work not in protection, but in betrayal.

4. The Empress

Upright – The sovereign of abundance and the embodiment of feminine power. She signifies fertility, prosperity, and the blessings of nature. Beauty, creativity, and material wealth flow through her domain. A contented ruler of her world, she nurtures life and prosperity with grace. A sign of growth, financial gain, and fulfillment in love and family.

Reversed – The unraveling of abundance. Loss of wealth, status, or security. Betrayal driven by greed. Relationships that fail to nourish, work without reward, or ventures that bring no true satisfaction. Can signify divorce, broken trust, or the painful interruption of fertility and creation.

5. The Emperor

Upright – The fortress of authority and order. He embodies protection, stability, and the defense of principle and territory. A figure of leadership and command, he brings structure, discipline, and the realization of long-held ambitions. His presence signals status, success, and the power to establish lasting foundations.

Reversed – Authority distorted into tyranny. Dictatorship, oppression, or destructive control that suffocates rather than protects. Immaturity disguised as strength. Institutions of confinement and restriction — prisons, hospitals, or bureaucracies — where individual power is diminished. A warning against aggression, rigidity, and the misuse of command.

6. The Hierophant

Upright – The voice of higher law. The priest, the vow, the guardian of tradition, and the keeper of sacred knowledge. Represents spirituality, morality, trust, and the power of belief. His counsel is wise, his word binding. Often a sign of good advice, protection, or one's connection to the egregor — the collective spirit that guides and shelters. This card can mark a test of faith or a trial of knowledge and skill, demanding integrity without judgment.

Reversed – The distortion of sacred order. Breach of law, corruption of faith, or the influence of a sect. Can signify double standards, insincerity, or extremism cloaked in the language of belief. May point to aggressive behavior rooted in ideology or a person lacking objectivity and self-criticism. Pretending to be righteous while disregarding true principles.

7. The Lovers

Upright – The path of duality and choice. Union, attraction, and the meeting of two forces that mirror and complete each other. This card calls for listening to the heart, weighing desire against duty, and finding harmony through give and take. It may herald a new lover, a partnership, or a decision that will shape destiny.

Reversed – A fracture of harmony. Breakups, betrayal, or the burden of a wrong choice. Indicates narcissism, imbalance, or the collapse of trust. Inauspicious for travel or ventures requiring cooperation. A warning of loss when unity falters and choices are made without integrity.

8. The Chariot

Upright – Motion with mastery. Direction, discipline, and the will to command forces toward victory. The Chariot signifies progress, control, and the ability to manage competing elements with precision. It is the energy of conquest — domination through focus, persistence, and strategic alignment.

A sign of steady advancement, triumph, and success through determination.

Reversed – The reins slip from one's grasp. Defeat, dependency, or loss of command over a situation. Progress is blocked by restrictions, weakness, or external control. May point to accidents, setbacks, or the collapse of direction when focus is lost.

9. Strength

Upright – Power, courage, and mastery of the self. The ability to persuade without force, to hold steady when others falter. A card of inner resilience and calm authority that tames both inner and outer beasts.

Reversed – Exhaustion and wasted effort. Energy misdirected, freedom curtailed by force. Can signify captivity, coercion, or entanglement in struggles that drain vitality. A warning against pushing beyond one's limits.

10. The Hermit

Upright – Seclusion, reflection, and the pursuit of inner truth. A guide's lantern in the dark, symbolizing wisdom earned through solitude and transformation. Choosing retreat to refine vision and strengthen the soul.

Reversed – Emerging from withdrawal or isolation. Recovery after illness, depression, or hardship. Freedom regained, movement resumed — yet the challenge is to carry inner wisdom back into the world.

11. The Wheel of Fortune

Upright – Destiny turns, bringing change beyond human control. A fated event, a sudden shift of circumstance, fortune's rise, or an unexpected windfall. The cycle moves onward, reminding us that nothing remains fixed.

Reversed – A downturn of fate, unforeseen losses, or disruptive endings. A chain of events closes the cycle, often harsh yet unavoidable. What collapses now clears the way for what must come.

12. Justice

Upright – Law and order. Rules enforced. Fair judgment. Karma strikes with precision.

Reversed – Corruption. Deception. Shadows move outside the law. Crime leaves its mark.

13. The Hanged Woman

Upright – A woman suspended, caught in crisis from the weight of others' demands — or her own compliance with false rules. Sacrifice to illusory goals. Victimhood, clouded vision, stagnation. Yet within the stillness lies the call to transform: to stand upright again, see through new eyes, and reclaim sovereignty.

Reversed – Dependence and co-dependence. The knot loosens, the hard period eases. Crisis begins to resolve, and freedom edges closer.

14. Death

Upright – The great transformation. An ending that clears the way for rebirth. Cycles close, doors shut, and attachments fall away. It is the discipline of asceticism, the surrender of what no longer serves. In its shadow lies religion, ritual, and the stripping down to essentials. Death is not annihilation, but passage — into new form, new life, new order.

Reversed – Physical death, or the stark finality of no future, no renewal. The path is blocked; opportunities wither. A cycle ends with no rebirth on the horizon — only stillness, emptiness, and the demand to face inevitability.

15. Temperance

Upright – The art of harmony. The patient blending of opposites into a higher unity. Peace through balance, healing through moderation. It is the healer's touch, the alchemist's craft — conflict resolved not by force but by measured exchange. Temperance teaches discipline in pacing: knowing when to advance, when to hold, and when to yield. It brings recovery, renewal, and the restoration of strength.

Reversed – Discord and imbalance. Pettiness, haste, and the squandering of energy. Impatience blocks healing; stagnation prevents progress. No clear direction, no fruitful outcome. The lesson is lost when extremes are indulged, and harmony is abandoned for restless struggle.

16. The Devil

Upright – Chains of desire and control. Obsession, addiction, and the lure of power at any cost. The battlefield here is psychological: manipulation, betrayal, and victory by unlawful or dishonorable means. This card warns of entrapment in toxic strategies — where ambition blinds and dependency weakens resolve. What appears as strength may, in truth, be enslavement.

Reversed – Breaking the chain. Liberation from restrictive forces, toxic alliances, or manipulative tactics. The enemy's hold weakens, and the path opens toward autonomy. Old strategies that relied on corruption or dependency are abandoned, giving way to clear ground and freedom of movement. It is a disciplined retreat from the snares of obsession into renewed strength.

17. The Tower

Upright – Sudden strike. Karmic events shatter defenses and tear down false strongholds. Collapse comes swiftly, leaving ruin in its wake — but within destruction lies liberation. The battlefield clears; illusions fall. What could not endure was never built to last.

Reversed – The storm has passed. The prison doors break open, and the rubble settles. Though property or resources may be lost, freedom is gained. Survival after destruction is itself a victory — new ground upon which stronger structures may be built.

18. The Star

Upright – A guiding light in the night campaign. Fame, vision, and high aspirations illuminate the path ahead. It is the banner of hope, the sign that morale is strong and victory possible. Wishes are not mere dreams — they are coordinates pointing toward the future. Confidence in destiny fuels endurance, and under this star, allies gather, plans align, and purpose shines clear.

Reversed – The light dims, and the army falters. Lack of faith in oneself breeds hesitation; unrealized potential becomes a burden rather than a weapon. Depression, procrastination, and frustration scatter forces, leaving the campaign vulnerable. Without belief in the horizon, soldiers lose formation, and the war within becomes harder than the one without.

19. The Moon

Upright – The Moon is the battlefield at night: shadows move, shapes deceive, and every sound carries the weight of fear. It speaks of past lives, memory, and the hidden patterns of destiny that return like echoes in the dark. Illusion and ritual dominate this terrain — here one must tread carefully, for not all that glitters is truth. To fight under the Moon is to face phantoms, both within and without. Strategy demands patience, intuition, and the courage to advance without full knowledge of the field.

Reversed – The night begins to break. Deceptions unravel, clarity dawns, and fear loses its grip. What was hidden is revealed, and the enemy exposed. The dark period ends as intuition sharpens into foresight. This is the moment when the commander trusts instinct above reports, sensing the truth in silence and finding the hidden path to victory.

20. The Sun

Upright – The Sun rises like a victorious banner, illuminating the battlefield with clarity and strength. It is the radiance of triumph, the warmth of allies united, the joy of success earned through discipline. Here stands the king, exalted in status and surrounded by loyal forces. It is happiness not as fleeting pleasure, but as the steady flame of vitality, prosperity, and rightful achievement.

Reversed – The Sun burns too fiercely and scorches instead of nourishes. Arrogance blinds the commander, vanity isolates the leader, and ego fractures alliances. Joy withers when gratitude is absent, and success turns hollow when pursued without honor. Here lies the danger of overextending one's forces — expending energy without gain, leaving only conflict where light should have brought peace.

21. Judgment

Upright – A call to rise and account for one's actions. Transformation comes through reckoning with past choices, and advancement is earned only by results. It is the moment of exam, of verdict, of recognition — where effort meets consequence. Renewal follows only after truth is faced without fear.

Reversed – The march forward stalls. Old debts and hidden flaws surface — skeletons from the past demand attention. Unfinished business binds progress, leaving the warrior trapped until what was left unresolved is confronted.

22. The World

Upright – The campaign reaches its final triumph. Completion, mastery, and recognition — both public and private — crown the seeker. The circle closes, the goal is achieved, and the warrior stands exalted at the summit of effort. Harmony of all forces, higher status, fulfillment of destiny.

Reversed – Victory remains unfinished. Loose ends drag behind, restricting movement. The cycle demands proper closure before the next can begin. Without resolution, advancement stalls, and the seeker is bound in a loop until discipline and clarity restore the path forward.

The Closing Arc of the Major Arcana

The path of Major Arcana is a campaign of the spirit. From the raw impulse of The Fool to the seasoned wisdom of Judgement and the ultimate triumph of The World, each card marks a stage of discipline, trial, and transformation.

Judgement calls the warrior to account: every action, every misstep, every victory weighed against the standards of truth. Nothing remains hidden: skeletons emerge, debts are paid, and the final test of integrity must be faced.

The World is the summit beyond trial—the coronation of endurance. Here, the cycle is completed: the campaign is won, recognition is granted, and harmony is achieved. Yet even this triumph is not eternal—it signals readiness to begin anew, with greater mastery and vision.

Wood

1. One of Wood – The Rice

Upright – Family, community, and joint effort. Strength in numbers; success through coordination. Working within rules, belonging to a team, and loyalty to shared goals. Relationships are nurturing; wealth is tied to collective effort. Professions are linked to cultivation, education, or care.

Reversed – Isolation, inability to fit in, and resistance to cooperation. Weak earnings when working alone. A loner by nature or circumstance. Friction with groups may arise from personality or pride.

2. Two of Wood – The Food

Upright – Basic income, nourishment, and the security of a simple life. Comfort through essentials, not luxury. The matriarch or grandmother energy—steady, charitable, and content with little. Auspicious for short trips or weekend escapes. Character: plain, unsophisticated, and generous. Relationships are low-maintenance and genuine. Wealth is modest yet stable. Professions are tied to everyday service—clerks, receptionists, grocers, and bookkeepers. Investments bring small, conservative returns.

Reversed – Food poisoning, overindulgence, or poor judgment. Pretentious behavior masking insecurity. Help is refused or unavailable. A shallow or unreliable character.

3. Three of Wood – The Ancestors

Upright – Strength flows through lineage and tradition. Ancestral support, karmic protection, and family blessings stand behind the querent. Relationships are steady, conservative, and rooted in clan values. Wealth reflects family fortune: inheritance, antiques, and collective trust outweigh personal gain. Professions favor archives, history, cultural research, genetics, and the humanities. Travel is auspicious only when tied to family—otherwise, caution is advised.

Reversed – The link to lineage is frayed. Weak family support, lack of guidance, or disconnection from ancestral blessings. One must rely solely on personal resources.

Relationships may lack stability, and wealth cannot be secured through family ties.

4. Four of Wood – The Illusion

Upright – Reality is obscured by mist. Decisions made now rest on false ground, easy to collapse. Travel brings danger—wrong time, wrong place, wrong companions. The character is narcissistic, delusional, or reckless, often tangled in risky or unlawful ventures. Relationships are unstable, bound to irresponsible partners. Wealth vanishes like smoke—the gambler’s curse. Professions thrive in the arts, performance, and illusion—actors, filmmakers, entertainers, politicians, and media tricksters. Investments are tempting yet unsustainable.

Reversed – The veil lifts, and the smokescreen can be pierced. Yet one may still need to perform a role, using illusion as a cloak to conceal intent or strategy.

5. Five of Wood – Flute

Upright – The flute sings with natural creativity, weaving inspiration and joy into the air. Charisma flows, drawing others in. Journeys, especially by air, are smooth and light. The character is likable, artistic, and independent—an inspiring presence with a pleasant voice. Relationships are romantic and enjoyable, though prone to sudden changes. Wealth decisions lack clarity; assistance is required. Professions thrive in the arts, Feng Shui, teaching, politics, or performance. Investments are playful rather than serious, bringing minimal profit. People signify talented mentors, young musicians, dancers, and artists.

Reversed – The flute falls silent - heavy and uninspiring. Relationships become strained, uncomfortable, or purely materialistic. Creativity is blocked; joy withheld.

Fire

1. One of Fire – Rainbow

Upright – The rainbow blazes with versatility and talent, symbolizing the freedom to pursue one's desires. Joyful journeys bring vibrant experiences. This character is gifted, multi-talented, and creative, yet often struggles with grounding and emotional balance. Relationships may scatter into multiple simultaneous connections. Wealth flows from diverse income streams. Careers thrive in dynamic, people-centered environments—youth work, education, sales, freelancing, or multicultural spaces. Investments favor diversification and short-term strategies, bringing modest gains or losses. People appear as cheerful, gifted children or joyful companions. Events manifest as celebrations, holidays, or carefree pleasures.

Reversed – The rainbow fades—no joy, no choice. Life turns flat, monotonous, and uninspiring. Freedom shrinks into obligation, and color drains into a grey routine.

2. Two of Fire – Thunder

Upright – Thunder cracks across the battlefield: sudden attacks, anger, and unforeseen dangers appear without warning. Travel is favorable only for short distances, longer journeys risk disruption. The character is volatile, a spark that ignites easily, prone to provocation and unpredictability. Relationships flare and fade quickly, seldom lasting. Wealth may vanish in an instant, lost to lightning-like setbacks. Professionally, this card suits soldiers, police officers, executives, and those who thrive in command-and-response roles. It is auspicious for childbirth but unfavorable for long-term health, signaling sudden shifts in chronic conditions—toward either healing or crisis. Investments face volatility and instability.

People appear as young men over 21, hot-headed and difficult to restrain. Events strike like storms—fast-moving, dangerous, and painful. Risk should be avoided.

Reversed – The thunder hides within the clouds: dangers remain but strike with less force. Travel may be delayed. Surprisingly, this position can favor reconciliation, as the storm weakens and space opens for peace.

3. Three of Fire – The Pillar

Upright – The Pillar rises not from freedom, but from endurance. It represents the weight one bears for harmony's sake—smiling through the storm to keep others at peace. Journeys here are suited for pilgrimages or visiting family in need—sacrificial rather than leisurely. In business or pleasure, restrictions and unexpected expenses mark the way. The character is outwardly pleasant, though bitterness may linger within. Wealth is often spent to meet others' expectations, rarely saved for oneself. Professions linked to this card require immense sacrifice and devotion—ballet dancers, athletes, musicians, doctors, or surgeons. Health demands discipline and structure through diet and routine. Investments yield little; profits are consumed by duty. People appear as community leaders, carers, monks, nuns, or nurses. Events call for patience, dedication, and selflessness, often requiring personal sacrifice for family, community, or nation.

Reversed – The Pillar crumbles under selfishness. Ego overtakes duty, and the communal spirit is abandoned.

4. Four of Fire – The Cave

Upright – The Cave holds true wealth—the kind that cannot be stolen or lost. It is health, harmony, and enduring relationships, sustained by a steady flow of resources that ensure growth. Journeys under this card are auspicious, safe, and fruitful. The character is humble, honest, and blessed with good karma. Wealth is stable and rooted in integrity and long-term potential. Professions include banking, finance, skilled trades, and reputable enterprises built on trust and respect. Investments bring profit and stability. People appear as young men under 25, earnest and reliable. Events manifest as promising ventures and opportunities that secure lasting prosperity.

Reversed – The Cave becomes hollow, its treasures corrupted. Integrity fades as greed, dishonesty, or unethical practices take hold.

What once promised stability turns into a trap of false wealth.

5. Five of Fire – The Phoenix

Upright – The Phoenix rises from its ashes, embodying the eternal cycle of life, death, and rebirth. It calls for transformation—to burn away what no longer serves and be reborn stronger and freer. Journeys under this card are transformative, often involving deep healing or medical renewal. The character is courageous and adaptable, open to new cultures and environments. Relationships require selflessness and evolution—ego must die for love to thrive. Wealth may fluctuate, but transformation brings renewal. Professions include surgeons, lawyers, actors, astrologers, psychologists, life coaches, and rescue workers, those who facilitate profound change. Investments may dip before recovery, yet long-term outcomes remain positive. People appear as career-driven, dedicated professionals. Events emerge as turning points—moments of crisis or opportunity that lead to total reinvention.

Reversed – Resistance to change. The Phoenix cannot rise while clinging to ashes. Stagnation, fear, and refusal to transform trap one in cycles of decay.

Earth

1. One of Earth – The Well

Upright – The Well is life itself—the hidden source that sustains survival. It demands depth, effort, and patience, requiring one to dig until truth and sustenance are found. It represents long-term projects, enduring foundations, and ventures that need persistence before yielding reward. Journeys under this card are mostly inauspicious, except for relocation or commitments lasting longer than three months. It favors staying home, restoring order, and cultivating stability.

The character is thoughtful, analytical, and reliable. Relationships reveal unconditional love, loyalty, and bonds that withstand the test of time. Wealth emerges from uncovering hidden opportunities, reinventing forgotten ideas, or reviving timeless practices. Suitable professions include investigators, auditors, scientists, healers, and keepers of tradition. Investments are auspicious if long-term. People symbolized are mothers, wise women, and elders who carry ancestral knowledge.

Reversed – The Well runs dry. Inauspicious in all contexts, it signifies decline, poor health, dishonesty, or ventures that lead to collapse or bankruptcy. The foundation is unstable; the source is depleted.

2. Two of Earth – The Tunnel

Upright – The Tunnel is a passage through trial—a narrow path leading toward light. It marks a time of challenge, difficulty, or constraint that ultimately brings renewal and progress. Journeys may begin with obstacles, delays, or confusion, yet perseverance ensures safe arrival.

The character is resilient, optimistic, and unafraid of hardship—one who finds solutions and emerges stronger. Relationships deepen through endurance and shared trials. Wealth grows from humble beginnings into lasting success, often achieved after setbacks. Professions include guides, healers, counselors, or anyone leading others from shadow to clarity. Investments may face early losses but bring long-term stability. Events point to childbirth, testing periods, and situations that must be endured for growth.

Reversed – The Tunnel collapses. Circumstances worsen beyond control, creating entrapment or prolonged struggle. Auspicious outcomes are blocked, and the querent faces stagnation or loss.

3. Three of Earth – The Pyramid

Upright – The Pyramid rises as a monument to strength, stability, and endurance. It signifies mastery-built stone by stone—achievements that withstand the erosion of time. Journeys are auspicious, guided by purpose and elevation.

The character is mature, disciplined, and established—a person whose reputation commands respect. Relationships are structured, often hierarchical, with one guiding or protecting the other. Wealth accumulates steadily, sometimes across generations, and investments promise golden opportunities with lasting returns. People represented include rulers, high priests, CEOs, and leaders whose authority shapes the destiny of many.

Reversed – The Pyramid crumbles. Weakness, decay, and misfortune strip away stability. Loss of rank, rights, or entitlements leads to decline. What once seemed eternal reveals its fragility.

4. Four of Earth – The Labyrinth

Upright – The Labyrinth is the maze of confusion—problems often self-created, paths that lead nowhere, and time lost in search of clarity. Journeys risk delays, detours, or complete disorientation.

The character is one who overthinks, clouds their own judgment, and repeatedly entangles themselves in difficult situations. Wealth is hindered by poor decisions and lack of direction, creating recurring obstacles and little true progress. Careers align with warehouses, recycling depots, personal organizing, or courts of law—work tied to sorting, repeating, or untangling. Investments falter if not deeply researched, often resulting in preventable losses. People represented are the unclear, the confused, or those impossible to read. Events show loops and cycles—going in circles until one returns to the beginning to start anew.

Reversed – The maze darkens—entrapment, manipulation, and gaslighting. Confusion is imposed by others or through abusive dynamics, where escape is impossible without outside help.

5. Five of Earth – The Altar

Upright – The Altar reminds us that giving precedes receiving. Karma's dues are paid not through loss but through conscious offering: feeding animals, tending the family altar, lighting incense, or honoring tradition.

On a journey, unexpected expenses may arise—gifts for relatives, offerings for children, or contributions that maintain harmony. The character is generous, respectful, and compassionate - easygoing yet grounded in ethics; conservative yet deeply kind. Relationships reflect care, generosity, and a sense of responsibility. Wealth flows only while it circulates; to hoard is to stop the flow.

Professions align with the arts, ballet, theater, service, and all roles of offering—temple caretakers, volunteers, charity leaders, animal protectors. Investments may come with hidden fees or higher taxes. People shown are healers, ceremonial hosts, and guardians of tradition. Events center around rituals, offerings, or acts of spiritual acknowledgment.

Reversed – Refusal to pay one's dues brings stagnation and difficulty. Negative in all areas except travel, which may still proceed smoothly.

Metal

1. One of Metal – The Goldmine

Upright – The Goldmine reveals hidden worth. It is the discerning eye that notices what others overlook and the patience that gathers treasures grain by grain. On any journey, it favors those who recognize uniqueness and seize quiet opportunities. The character represented is understated yet deeply skilled, with rare talents and an attention to detail that set them apart. In relationships, this person is reliable but sometimes frugal—steadfast, though not extravagant. Wealth grows slowly through reinvestment rather than waste, leading to steady and healthy accumulation. Investments are gradual yet secure, yielding long-term prosperity. Professions align with valuers, antique or art dealers, gallery owners, agents, or anyone skilled in identifying and nurturing hidden talent. This card also reflects modest, hardworking individuals or diligent students. Events may bring unexpected treasures or encounters with someone whose talent proves life-changing.

Reversed – Potential wasted, opportunities overlooked. Something valuable may be lost or left unrealized through neglect, lack of recognition, or fear of success.

2. Two of Metal – The AI

Upright – The AI card speaks of logic, systems, and predictability. It represents the cold order of machinery, the protocol that cannot be bent, the process that unfolds without compassion or creativity. Journeys here are safe only when the itinerary is followed by precisely – no surprises, no extras, only the expected outcome. The character is formal, disciplined, and sometimes unforgiving, valuing rules over emotions. Relationships under this card are stable but distant, where flexibility is often sacrificed for predictability. Wealth grows gradually through careful analysis and adherence to structured systems. Investments succeed long-term when grounded in solid research and patience. Professions include management, government service, the military, law enforcement, surgery, medicine, security, manufacturing, and technology—fields where order and precision prevail. Events point to a situation bound by rules, where negotiation is limited and compliance is required.

Reversed – Chaos in the machine. Protocols break, and order collapses. This may appear as disorder, mental instability, or destructive forces. A curse, malfunction, or rogue system may emerge—something that must be dismantled before it inflicts harm.

3. Three of Metal – The Weapon

Upright – The Weapon signifies potential danger—something sharp, cutting, and precise that can wound if misused. Journeys under this card carry risks of injury, intoxication, or sudden conflict. The character is sharp-minded, brilliant, and detail-focused, yet susceptible to twisted thinking that may lead to destructive encounters. In relationships, the Weapon reflects attraction combined with pressure, high expectations, and strict standards. Wealth may arise from questionable sources—illegal activity, smuggling, or trade in jewels and precious metals. Professions include jewelers, chemists, lab scientists, criminal lawyers, investigators, or those who navigate hazardous environments. Events often suggest misfortune—accidents, sharp injuries, or encounters with violence.

Reversed – The danger cannot be avoided—it becomes inevitable. A destructive force enters the querent's life and must be confronted directly.

4. Four of Metal – The Vault

Upright – The Vault symbolizes hidden wealth—whether material treasures, secret knowledge, or spiritual reserves yet to be discovered. Journeys under this card are profitable but lead to concealed places or guarded people, revealed only through patience. The character is emotionally reserved, silent, and resourceful, holding much beneath the surface. Relationships are conservative, often influenced by material concerns or hidden motives. Wealth here is secure. It is locked away, stable, and enduring. Investments favor the long term, particularly in bonds, savings, or secured assets. Professions include wealth management, banking, security, museums, and institutions that protect or preserve. Events point to complex situations where solutions lie hidden, requiring patience and insight to uncover.

Reversed – Prosperity is blocked and wealth or funds cannot be accessed. Resources, opportunities, or relationships are sealed and out of reach for now.

5. Five of Metal – Mercury

Upright – An endlessly mutable energy drives swift and unexpected transformation, movement, and exhilarating but potentially toxic situations. Journeys under this card move quickly, often with unexpected gains or shortcuts, yet can just as easily collapse. The character is flexible, intellectual, and instantly likable, yet emotionally or mentally unstable—difficult to rely upon. In relationships, it signals volatility, high demands, and challenges in maintaining harmony. Wealth fluctuates wildly; no solid gains possible. Professions include technology, fashion, intelligence services, or any field driven by fast-paced change. Events may seem exciting but conceal danger, such as one-night stands or fleeting, opportunities which are ‘too good to be true’.

Reversed – The fast-moving energy collapses into stagnation. Progress slows, turning into burdensome, long-term challenges with lasting effects.

Water

1. One of Water – Wine

Upright – A card of altered state of mind. The Wine can symbolize celebration, family gatherings, and a cheerful atmosphere that dissolves barriers. Journeys are pleasant and light-hearted. The character is relaxed, happy (delusional), and easy to be around.

Relationships are harmonious, marked by ease of connection born from a certain degree of superficiality. Wealth is fluid — flowing in and out — as money is spent on enjoyment. Work often relates to hospitality, cafés, restaurants, tourism, travel agencies, catering, or wine distribution. Investments require constant reassessment as circumstances shift. People represented include sailors, bartenders, young professionals, and sales assistants.

Reversed – Sobriety replaces indulgence. Clarity and sober reflection emerge, often accompanied by tension, boredom, or lack of joy.

2. Two of Water – Pig

Upright – The Pig represents humble beginnings and raw foundations. It points to a life grounded in simplicity — mud, earth, and honest effort. This may describe someone of modest means, with basic education and simple needs, connected to the land or institutions such as schools and hospitals. Relationships are plain and straightforward, free from pretension. Wealth is minimal but sufficient for a healthy life. Work is labor-oriented — farming, recycling, or essential services. Investments bring modest returns. Symbolically, the Pig embodies humility, resilience, and the wisdom of living within one's means. People represented may include children, refugees, or those at the start of their journey. Trips are simple and achievable, focused on necessity rather than luxury.

Reversed – Negligence, filth, and lack of discipline. This can indicate homelessness, poverty caused by inertia or poor choices, and behavior that falls below acceptable standards. A warning of moral or practical decay that must be addressed before growth can occur.

When reversed, it reminds us to cleanse, purify, and rebuild — for neglect only leads to decay.

3. Three of Water – The Fountain

Upright – The Fountain symbolizes success, joy, and life in abundance. It embodies vitality, generosity, and effortless flow. It radiates optimism and energy that inspire others. Relationships are passionate and fulfilling, rich in emotional exchange. Wealth and resources circulate freely, supporting both growth and pleasure. Journeys are scenic and enjoyable, filled with beauty and delight. Work aligns with creative design, public service, landscaping, or community planning — roles that bring joy and inspiration to others. Investments flourish, producing excellent results. People represented are hopeful and full of vitality, often young adults.

Reversed – The waters run dry. Joy fades, replaced by emptiness, sadness, or stagnation. A sense of depletion or loss of inspiration may arise — a call to restore flow and emotional connection.

4. Four of Water – Dragonfly

Upright – The Dragonfly embodies adaptability, quick thinking, and the ability to turn confusion into opportunity. It thrives in changing conditions, guiding us to transform obstacles into stepping stones. Through lightness, networking, and resourcefulness, it finds solutions where logic alone may fail.

Reversed – Inflexibility and hesitation create confusion. Resistance to change or delayed reactions lead to errors and missed chances. One may feel overwhelmed or trapped by uncertainty.

5. Five of Water – The Vortex

Upright – Being pulled into unpredictable circumstances, entangled in others' agendas, or burdened by unresolved karma. The Vortex may signify black magic, deep addiction, or destructive influences. Relationships reveal domination and imbalance; wealth and investments drain away without return. It represents negative or clingy individuals who deplete energy and resources.

Reversed – Liberation and release. This signifies paying karmic debts, breaking spells, recovering what was lost, or severing ties with toxic attachments. Freedom from destructive influences opens the path to reclaiming personal power.

The Deities

The Chief (Zhi Fu 值符)

Upright – The Chief is a commanding presence, the highest auspice. Obstacles dissolve, enemies scatter, and clarity reigns. When power is at its height, act with precision and certainty. Use momentum to secure position and inspire confidence.

Reversed – Still auspicious, though outcomes may differ from expectations. Assistance may appear in unusual forms, or gains may arrive through indirect means. Remain adaptable. Authority must be flexible or it risks breaking under its own weight. Accept unorthodox allies and unexpected outcomes.

Sky (Jiu Tian 九天)

Upright – Sky lifts vision upward. Noble help descends, protection is granted, and horizons expand. It represents tall structures, high aspirations, and elevation of rank. Seize opportunities to rise above conflict. Seek counsel from those of higher status, and do not fear ambitious goals.

Reversed – Protection thins and aspirations falter. Aid is absent, or support cannot be claimed. Associates may prove petty, limited, or materialistic. When the high road is closed, advance through humility and patience. Avoid unreliable allies and strengthen your own foundations.

Tiger-Worm (Bai Hu 白虎 / Gou Chen 勾陈)

Upright (Tiger, Bai Hu 白虎) – The Tiger strikes with ferocity. Swift aggression, decisive action, and ruthless efficiency. It brings conflict but also the strength to break resistance.

Strike hard when timing demands but know the cost of destruction. Victory through force must be decisive, not prolonged.

Reversed (Worm, Gou Chen 勾陈) - Aggression lingers but turns passive or corrosive. Instead of clean strikes, attrition and slow decay set in. Hidden conflicts erode stability over time. Guard against the poison of drawn-out disputes. Do not waste strength in passive-aggressive maneuvers. End what cannot be mended quickly.

Snake (Teng She 騰蛇)

Upright – The Snake coils in mystery. It embodies illusion, ritual, and the hidden arts of transformation. Power to deceive, enchant, or transmute circumstances lies within its grasp.

When direct force fails, use subtlety, manipulation, or the power of diplomacy. What cannot be broken may be reshaped through cunning.

Reversed – The illusion collapses. Fear loses its grip, and the threat proves hollow. Deception no longer binds or wounds. When shadows disperse, advance with clarity. Use truth itself as a weapon. Do not fight ghosts - conserve strength for real battles.

Earth (Jiu Di 九地)

Upright – Earth grounds and stabilizes. It is warm, steady, nurturing, and enduring. Its influence is quiet but lasting; growth is slow yet certain. Represents modest resources that nonetheless fulfill their purpose.

Build strength through patience, discipline, and small but steady gains. Value what is simple and useful—the square foundation that endures storms.

Reversed – Earth becomes heavy, stagnant, immovable. What should anchor becomes an obstacle; what should nourish becomes a burden. Influence is misplaced or wasted, weighing down rather than supporting.

When foundations trap instead of sustaining, move lightly and discard the unnecessary. Do not cling to what has become dead weight—adapt before stability turns into a prison.

Tortoise/Vermilion Bird (Xuan Wu 玄武/ Zhu Que 朱雀)

Upright (Tortoise, Xuan Wu 玄武) - Master of shadows, deception, and hidden plots. This deity signals theft of wealth, time, or trust; schemes carried out in silence. An adversary may misuse resources or twist information for gain. Remain vigilant; guard what is yours.

Reversed (Vermilion Bird, Zhu Que 朱雀) – misinformation deliberately sown to weaken resolve. At times, it manifests as a silver tongue—public speaking, persuasion, or presentation—but rarely without cost.

Secure your flank, double-check intelligence, and never assume appearances reveal the full field of battle.

Combo (Liu He 六合)

Upright – The force of alliance, harmony, and shared destiny. This deity signifies bonds forged on common ground—partnerships that endure because they are rooted in values deeper than convenience.

It can herald marriage, business pacts, sworn brotherhoods, or alliances of nations—anywhere mutual benefit and loyalty intertwine. Shared vision brings strength and continuity.

Reversed - Fragile ties, false promises, lack of true alignment. The bond may be shallow or self-serving, destined to weaken under strain. What seems like unity may conceal division.

Enter alliances with clarity of values. Test the foundation before building upon it.

The Great Yin (Tai Yin 太阴)

Upright - The Great Yin is the lunar priestess of night and shadow - guardian of stillness, reflection, and hidden power. She embodies mysteries that thrive beyond the reach of sunlight -seduction, secrecy, and the weaving of spells. Like the hidden face of the moon, she conceals more than she reveals, testing the seeker's ability to pierce illusion.

Expect confusion, hidden motives, and secret enchantments. A person may be cloaked in beauty and charm yet guided by shadowed intentions. Magic, glamour, and unseen currents of power shape the battlefield - nothing is what it seems.

Reversed – The veil tears. Curses, ancestral knots, or hidden illnesses emerge, draining life force across bloodlines. Spells no longer linger in secret but manifest in undeniable form, forcing confrontation.

When The Great Yin appears, it is too late to act. What is hidden cannot be fought — only met with stillness. Transform within, and your guardians will shield you in silence.

Three Stars

Beast (Tian Qin 天禽星) 10pt

Italics

Upright - Set against fire and smoke, the Beast is an omnipresent creative force. The color scheme suggests a link to fire and earth elements. It can bring volcanoes back to life, spewing ashes into the air. By using its destructive powers, it creates fertile ground for renewal.

The Beast cannot be destroyed. It is the raw pulse of Nature — fierce, eternal, enforcing the Law that governs all life. In Chinese metaphysics, it represents the surge of Qi - life force, which unites Yin and Yang. It is wild, unstoppable, and uncontrollable. Like an emperor in an ancient kingdom, it cannot be opposed. It holds the power to reward, punish, or destroy.

Governing force or principle; ultimate authority; royalty or powerful individuals; talented person; intense character; creative genius; justice; major political power; surge of energy; electrical fire; forced transformation leading to transformation or expansion.

Reversed – heavy impact leading to complete destruction; unfair punishment; excessive force; serious illness; self-destructive behavior; gradual disintegration; inability to transform. Heavy blow, disorder, and unavoidable losses.

When the Beast rises, harness chaos as fuel, not foe. Stand firm in the storm, direct its energy, and let destruction clear the path for new creation. To resist blindly is to be crushed; to align with its force is to ride the charge toward victory.

Grace (Tian Ying 天英星)

Upright – Sacrifice for a noble cause, elegance, and distinction. This star embodies beauty, refinement, and grace - qualities that extend to art, fashion, and higher callings of spirit. It also speaks of dedication, endurance, and the willingness to act decisively, even at personal cost.

Reversed – Entitlement, lack of dedication, and faltering will. The noble spark dims into vanity, apathy, or indecision. One hesitates, unwilling to give or to act, squandering potential through weakness of resolve.

True grace is not passive - it is discipline under pressure. To move with elegance in chaos, one must unite beauty with endurance. The battlefield honors not appearance alone but the resolve that turns adversity into triumph.

Aid (Tian Fu 天辅星)

Upright – Guidance, empathy, and wisdom from teachers, elders, or allies. A place of safety where one can arrive unannounced and be heard. This star embodies mentorship, compassion, and the counsel that steadies the warrior's path.

Reversed – Withdrawal of support, indifference, or self-centeredness. The teacher withholds, the ally turns cold, and one must face hardship without expected assistance.

Aid cannot be assumed. On the field of life, count support as fortune, not entitlement. Prepare your strategies as if you stand alone - then accept help as the wind at your back, not the ground beneath your feet.

The Magick Keys are universal tools—symbols of access, strategy, and mastery. Each Key represents a solution, a force that opens, unlocks, or mobilizes resources when all else fails.

They speak of hidden mechanisms that ensure survival, and alignment with higher order. A Key may take the form of a weapon, a path, an answer, or a gate - but its essence is always the same: a solution that endures.

The Arrow

Upright – Support, inner strength, and the reserves one draws upon. Resources align for victory. The presence of backing in the fight for justice or survival. A challenge must be embraced - with resolve and confidence.

Reversed – Avoid direct standoffs; the ground is not secure. Victory falters through lack of strength, support, or resources. Contraction, subtraction. Loss is likely if battle is forced.

Know when to press forward and when to step aside. Strength lies not only in attack but in conserving power until the field favors you.

The Key

Upright – The solution, the passage, the ready answer. Access is granted through inner revelation, dreams, intuition, or the hand of another. A correct method emerges, allowing progress. Especially auspicious in matters of study, exams, or mastery. Fine-tuning brings precision and success.

Reversed – Access denied, control withheld. Answers remain hidden; approaches prove ineffective. Outcomes sour as opportunities remain out of reach, demanding patience and recalibration.

Not every gate can be forced. At times, retreat and observation yield more than assault. Wait for the right moment when the lock loosens of its own accord.

The Bee

Upright – Collective force, discipline, and order. The hive thrives on structure, precision, and shared purpose. Each action serves a greater mechanism—productive and purposeful. Success comes through alignment with the common goal.

Reversed – The hive breaks apart. Disorder, laziness, and ego prevail. A person or system becomes unpredictable, rejecting structure or hierarchy. What could serve the collective turns scattered and unproductive.

Power multiplies when discipline binds individuals into one body.
